Expect Columbus Man To Be Given Contract For S.
Court-St Paving.

The A. W. Burns Construction Co., of Columbus, was lowest bidder for construction of S. Court between the Norfolk and Western railroad and the city corporation limit according to announcement from the state highway department Wednesday afternoon.

Burns' bid was $35,151.10; brick furnished and delivered, $14,624.50. Although the department has 10 days in which to award the contract it is expected beyond doubt that the Burns Co., will get the job.

Mr. Burns only Tuesday completed construction of the Scioto Trail below this city. Tarring was completed just before the great downpour Tuesday afternoon. Burns had just backed his wagons around the road to prevent automobile drivers from passing when the rain came.

A guard has been placed at each end of the newly-constructed highway to prevent trespassers until the state highway department has accepted the road.

The construction company had left all its equipment at this site, presumably in contemplation of winning this contract.

Construction of paving in the south end will be started as soon as the water company and the gas company make necessary repairs in their pipe-lines in this road. A sewer must also be put in.

ESTIMATE PICKAWAY COUNTY STORM LOSS NEAR $100,000 MARK

The farm of Orin Dresbach, Pickaway-twp, suffered the brunt of the damage in Pickaway-co Tuesday afternoon when a terrific storm twisted its way through parts of the county.

Above is mute evidence of the terrible destruction the winds and hail did to Dresbach's land and property.

Telephone poles are shown across the highway north of the city. All that remained of a corncrib on the farm is shown in the middle left photograph. A large pile of corn is left unprotected as the storm tore the galvanized crib from its place and buried it into a field across the highway. Two demolished barns on the farm are shown in lower photographs. Two other barns were slightly damaged. Several chickens were killed when the barns collapsed.

The photograph in the upper left is that of the auto of M. G. Tucker, Columbus, which was wrecked when a tree fell on it in a Columbus street.

These pictures were furnished The Herald through the courtesy of The Columbus Dispatch.

Damage estimated at between $90,000 and $100,000 is reported throughout Pickaway-co Wednesday following a veritable cyclone that swept from just west of Circleville, both north and south of the city and east to as far as Tarleton taking property damage at innumerable farms and properties in its path. An accurate report of the beginning of the twister cannot be found for the path of the terrific wind and rain and hailstorm which swept the county varied so much that no one really knows where it started or where it ended. One thing is certain, that the path of destruction is found on two sides of this city, the north and the south.

DRESBACH SUFFERS
Probably the greater portion of the damage is found in Pickaway-twp at the Orin W. Dresbach farm. Adjoining properties are damaged here to the extent of several thousand dollars while Dresbach's farm is a veritable ruin. The outskirts of the storm seems to have extended as far south as the Kiger farm, with damage on the Ludwig property and the J. F. Bales farm west and east of Dresbach's.

On the north, Forest cemetery and property in the northern extreme of the city is damaged to a great extent. Mammoth trees, valued by their owners very highly have been uprooted with property in their path being damaged.

The storm appears to have proceeded along the Walnut-creek-pk for a distance of approximately four miles reeking its vengeance on the farms in that territory. Practically every farmer who could be reached reported damage, with $1,500 the greatest amount in this territory.

The part of the twister which struck the territory south of Circleville is thought to have continued eastward nearly as far as Tarleton. This village reports a terrific hail there at about 1:15 p. m. the same time that Circleville was deluged by the downfall.

ORIGIN MYSTERY
Just where the storm came from west of the city has not been ascertained although it is known that one property four miles west of the city suffered when a fruit orchard was uprooted. That was at the farm of Miller Patton on the Stevenson land at the Jackson and Williamsport pikes. The orchard of 15 trees, including 14 apple and one plum were destroyed. Patton reported that he could see the storm approaching and sent his family to the cellar. When asked if the storm appeared to come in a funnel-shape out of the sky, he said no that a great blow with hail and rain came with great speed, striking his farm.

It is believed that this is the first place the storm struck for Williamsport reports only a mild wind with a very pleasing rainfall.

CORN HURT
The Pickaway-co Farm Bureau announced that its reports were not complete on the damage the storm did to crops throughout the county. It is expected that considerable corn is cut to pieces by the hail in scattered parts of the storm's path while other corn is not damaged but greatly aided by the downfall.

Probably the greatest damage suffered by any one is that sustained by the telephone companies. The Citizens and the Ohio Bell. Earl W. Lutz, local superintendent of the Citizens Co. reports that the latest figures handed him is 62 poles down in the county. He says that there are probably others that have not yet been reported.

According to Lutz the greatest damage is done on the Island-rd where 15 poles are down in one stretch.

POLES, WIRES DOWN
The Bell Co. which carries lines through this county has 42 poles down, 11 north of this city, and 31 south on the Kingston-pk in one stretch. Two cables in the north part of the city are out putting practically subscribers in that part of the city without service.

Practically all rural subscribers are out of service on account of poles falling and breaking down wires. All in all, there are about 500 to 600 subscribers without telephone service. This fact makes news gathering in these territories extremely difficult. Reports from some districts are completely unavailable.

Lutz announced that extra help from the Citizen's company's other systems are being brought in Wednesday but it will require the greater part of a week before all subscribers will be returned to service.

Dr. Hartley C. Clarke, Pickaway-co's weather observer for the past 20 years, announces that the storm is far beyond anything he has ever seen. An employee on the Dresbach farm on the Kingston-pk says the cyclone greatly resembled a storm in Fayette-co in 1886 but he says he can remember nothing which can come near this storm.

MERCURY 100
Dr. Clarke says the official mercury jumped over the 100 degree mark just five minutes before the storm broke in this territory at shortly after 1 o'clock Tuesday. Clarke says he cannot remember when the temperature has reached this mark. The rain cut the mercury down about 20 degrees, but Wednesday was leaping back to between 80 and 90 degrees. Official reports had the mark at 66 degrees at 7 a. m.

DYNAMITED SALT CREEK, 2 ARE HELD

Francis and Men Continue
Slaght On Violators—
Fine Two Brothers.

Continuing his onslaught on violators of fish and game laws, Game Protector W. A. Francis of Kingston, reported Wednesday four men have been arrested, two have been found guilty and two others are to be given hearings on different charges.

The largest coup of Francis' activities in this section was made Monday when G. J. Burch and A. H. Heft of Lancaster, were arrested on a charge of dynamiting fish in Saltcreek, south of Laurelville. They were to be given hearings before Squire Robinson of Laurelville on July 7.

KILL THOUSANDS
Francis says that thousands of fish were thrown from the creek, killed by the dynamite charge which was placed in the creek at about 10 a. m. Sunday. Fish were laying all over the banks surrounding the creek for many yards both ways where the charge was placed.

Lester Coate, E. Main street tire shop proprietor, this city, and Loren Hoffman of the McGinnis farm near Whistler, reported that they saw the fish and Francis says he has several other witnesses who were at the scene and saw the men who placed the charge not more than four minutes after the blast occurred.

Just two weeks ago Francis and his deputies arrested four Yellow-bud men for placing dynamite in Yellowbud creek. They were fined $100 and costs. Francis also stated at that time that the men used a child to go into the creek to obtain the dynamite when the charge refused to go off on two occasions.

Isaac Ater, Williamsport, paid a fine of $25 and costs when he pleaded guilty before Squire E. C. Fricke Wednesday to a charge of fishing without a license with reel and rod. He was arrested on Deer Creek bridge at Williamsport.

Leo Rohrer, Darbyville, is committed to the county jail in default of payment of a fine of $25 and costs on a charge of hunting without a license. He was arrested near Darby Creek.

60 PLANES ARE BURNED

Chicago Municipal Airport Reports
Damage of Two Millions
In Fire.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Loss of more than $2,000,000 was sustained and airplane service out of Chicago virtually crippled when an early morning fire destroyed three hangers and sixty airplanes at the municipal airport here today.

Hangers of the Universal and Grey Goose airlines, and one of the two Stout line hangers were burned.

The sixty airplanes included twenty large tri-motored Fokkers, each valued at $55,000.

Two big Ford tri-motored planes housed in the stout hanger were the only planes saved. Seven others were rolled from the hangers by employees who risked their lives to save the planes, but all caught fire and burned to the ground.

Almost all the planes had been fueled and the gasoline tanks were full. As a result the fire flashed through the hangers rapidly.

A gasoline explosion in the Universal hanger was believed to have started the fire.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Valentine of E. Mound-st, announce the birth of a daughter, Tuesday, June 24.

Major Kingsford-Smith, commander of the ocean-spanning airplane Southern Cross, today paid magnificent tribute to the stuttering radio key on his plane, and the answering keys in radio stations along Newfoundland's treacherous coast.

CREW ELATED
The crew of the Southern Cross, elated beyond words over their achievement of being the first airmen successfully to span the western ocean from East to West, today were busy with preparations for a takeoff early tomorrow on the last leg of their flight to New York.

The great silver ship which has spanned continents and oceans, and now has literally flown around the world, looked the graceful bird that she is today as mechanics of the flying field here worked in frantic haste checking the motor, compass and other equipment of the plane, while other attendants rushed supplies of gasoline and motor oil for the ship.

Major Kingsford-Smith had hoped to be able to continue the flight to New York late today, but the virtual exhaustion of himself and members of his crew, and the time required to obtain the necessary supplies of fuel and oil, influenced him to postpone his hop-off until tomorrow morning.

The population of Harbor Grace, long accustomed to watching the passing of Trans-Atlantic planes, which saw the young Lockheed Lindbergh's fleet passage seaward to Paris and immortal globe saw the great tri-motored ship, the then Commander Byrd who, out toward the Grand Banks, later crashed up on the Grand Coast, at Van der Meer, today did their part in this feat, when a Trans-Atlantic plane accepted the hospitality of this community to write history in aviation.

THROUGH FOG
The flying field here, where local residents expect to see the plane of the great aviator, made the first successful start, what was expected.

The gallant crew of the plane ship came in for even more attention, although all realized that the airman were very tired and the main the bird's wish to be left alone to gain as much rest as possible during the stay here, was respected.

Major Kingsford-Smith and his men looked tired, but otherwise the best of health. All were from the 31 hours' steady run of their three heavy motors. Questions to them had either been written or shouted at the top of the questionnaire's lungs.

60 PLANES ARE BURNED

Chicago Municipal Airport Reports Damage of Two Millions in Fire.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Loss of more than $2,000,000 was sustained and airplane service out of Chicago virtually crippled when an early morning fire destroyed three hangers and sixty airplanes at the municipal airport here today.

Hangers of the Universal and Grey Goose airlines, and one of the two Stout line hangers were burned.

The sixty airplanes included twenty large tri-motored Fokkers, each valued at $55,000.

Two big Ford tri-motored planes housed in the stout hangar were the only planes saved. Seven others were rolled from the hangers by employees who risked their lives to save the planes, but all caught fire and burned to the ground.

Almost all the planes had been fueled and the gasoline tanks were full. As a result the fire flashed through the hangars rapidly.

A gasoline explosion in the Universal hangar was believed to have started the fire.

Is it possible that the President does not know that the Tariff Commission has fixed the average rate of this bill at more than 40 per cent, and that this figure was accepted and used by the advocates of the bill in the debates? Is it possible that the President does not know that this is an increase of 20 per cent over the existing law, according to the Commission's own figure? The arguments used by the arguments which Hoover, as Secretary of Commerce, and Hoover, as presidential candidate, used to show the absolute dependence of American prosperity upon foreign outlets for our mass production surplus, foreign markets now jeopardized by foreign tariff reprisals. No one can explain away the disastrous effects of this suicidal legislation of American prosperity. —PITTSBURGH PRESS (IND.)

The President's defense of the bill is more of an apology for its lack of lobbying and log-rolling. We are glad that he did not call it the best tariff bill we ever had. As it is, he will lose thousands upon thousands of votes by his brief sentence, "I shall approve the tariff bill." The tariff is a political burden for the Republican party. —N. Y. Evening POST (REF.)

The reaction at home and abroad is the most adverse evoked in the whole history of tariff making. Against such preponderance of evidence even the voice of a President is indeed a minority. The informed opinion of the country is that the Hawley-Smoot tariff is a dreadful mistake. For the consequences Mr. Hoover will now necessarily be held answerable. —LOUISIANA DISPATCH (IND.)

The very meager accomplishment in the bill has been more than offset by the political and economic price paid for its enactment. —CHICAGO TRIBUNE (REF.)

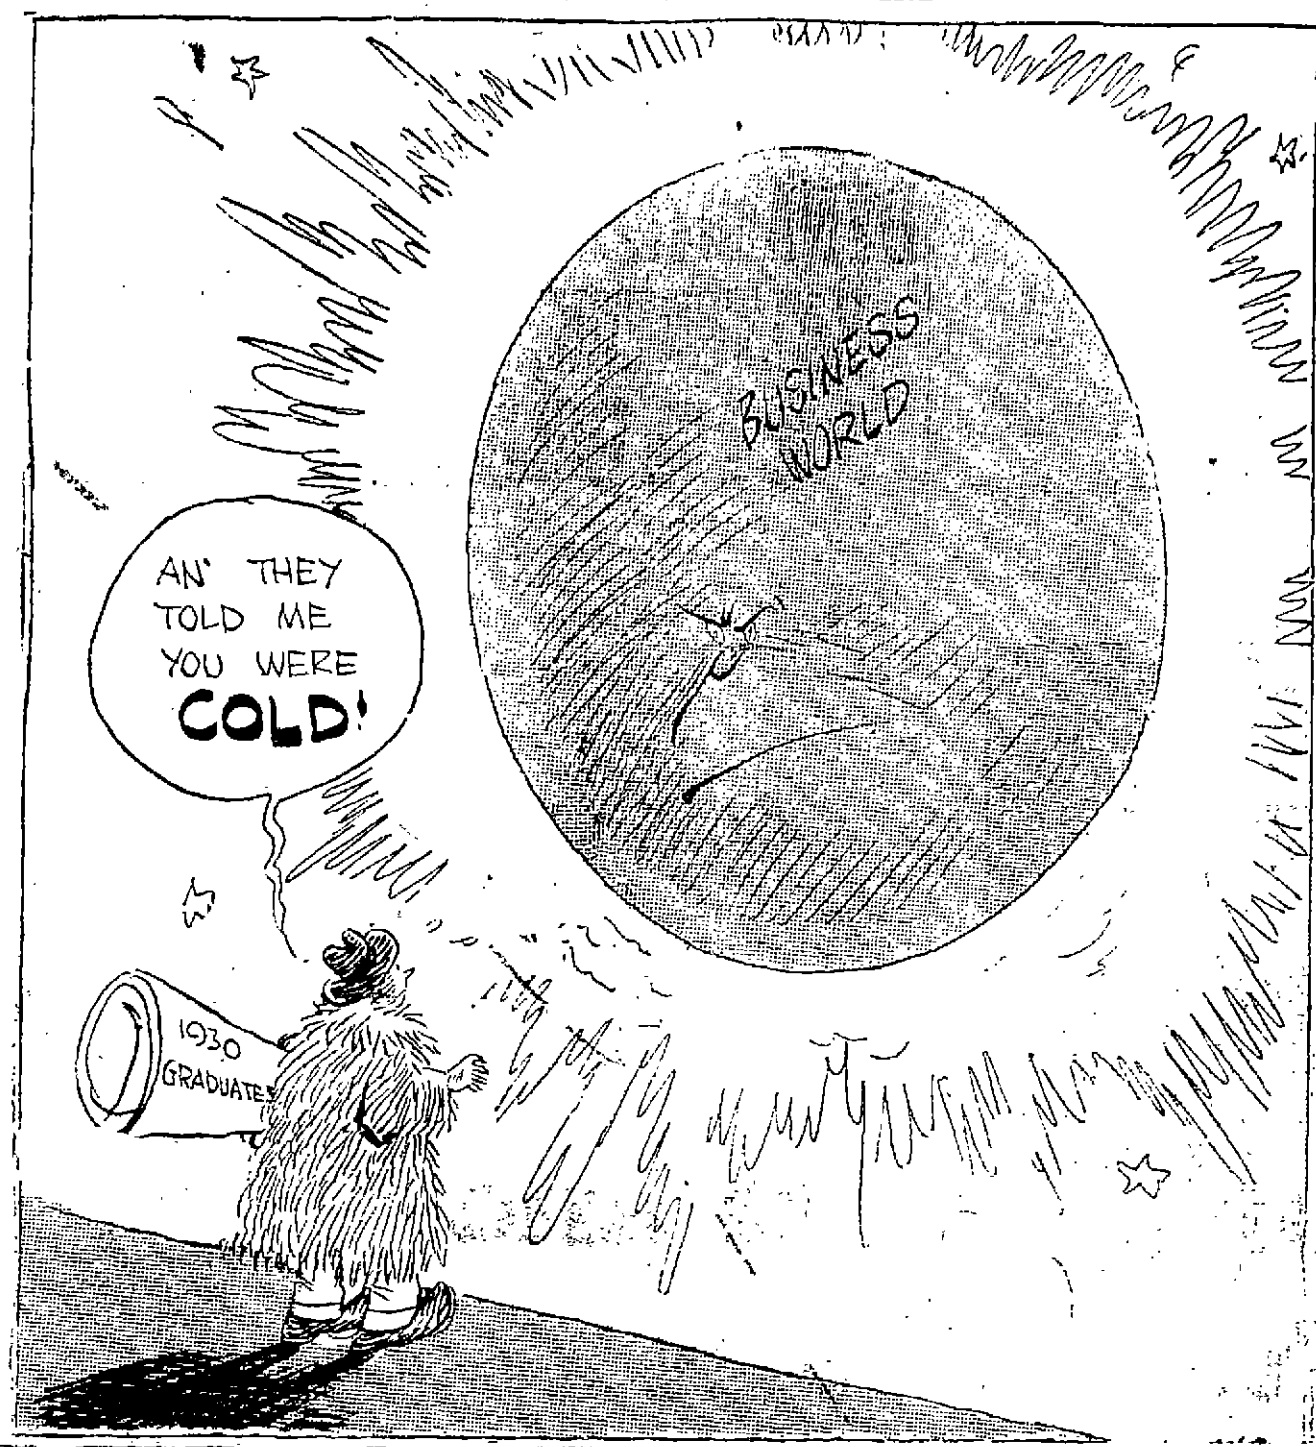

In order to establish the modest figure of the revision, Mr. Hoover has figures from the Tariff Commission, prepared for his convenience by officials whose political loyalty he will hold in the hollow of a hand. As an intellectual performance from an Economist President, Mr. Hoover's statement is pathetic to stand. Could it be that Mr. Hoover, the economist, such of whose strength in the White House was presumed to lie in his capacity to formulate and carry out sound economic policies, reached his signature to such a complete repudiation of his reputation of a sensible tariff revision? Alas, it not only could, but it has. And thus ends (or is it begins?) another noble experiment. —BALTIMORE SUN (IND. DEM.)

The opinion seems to be pretty early unanimous that the bill is effective. —PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER (REF.)

"Although uncertainty is undoubtedly bad for business, realization of a program of tariff revision that an influential section of the industrial and financial world as long been dreading is not the best kind of stimulus to apply to distressed industries. Silent acceptance of the Tariff Act would have been more reassuring than the statement that has issued from the White House. There can be no question that the Republican party deserves all that it will get, and perhaps more, for the way it has behaved itself in the past year and a half." —N. Y. JOURNAL OF COMMERCE (IND.)

"Never was a document damned with fainter praise. In an effort to justify the highest rates that ever have been imposed by a tariff, he resorts to a Smoot-like device of juggling statistics. It is a lousy statistical trick, deceiving nobody and altogether unworthy of the President of the United States. Mr. Hoover is more at ease in dealing with a commission man with Congress, but even if he were not destined to face selfish, scheming interests when he comes to apply the flexible section, the simple truth is that Congress has wrought more injustice to the consumers through the Hawley-Smoot tariff than the most industrious of commissions could correct in ten years. Placed where he had to be, president of the United States, president of the united manufacturers, he sided with the special interests that finance the Republican party." —RICHMOND (V.A.) LEADER (IND. ANOTHER HEAT VICTIM

"WHERE'S EMILY?"

by CAROLYN WELLS

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE.

ON the eve of her marriage to Rodney Sayre, Emily Duane disappears. She had left her Hilldale Park home, "Knollwood," to visit the hospital, but never reached there. Paul play is feared when Jim Pennington reports his wife, Pauline, and Emily's best friend, also missing.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIII.

INVOLUNTARILY, Pete looked for footprints.

But none were possible on the hard, stony road, covered, too, with falling Autumn leaves.

"The road—there was no footpath—led along a rather steep embankment, then across a bridge that spanned a wide and deep ravine, on to another bridge that crossed a smaller ravine, and then off to more level lands and a street which led to the Stevenson house."

Here Gibby was admitted, and soon greeted by a large, stalwart man of genial address and pleasant manner.

His errand made known, Alec Stevenson looked earnestly at him, and then asked him to go with him into his den.

There, with the door shut, his host told Pete that he had no use for the foreigner in question, but that Mrs. Stevenson was really daffy about him, and therefore he could say nothing to his disparagement.

"But what do you know of his standing, his history?" urged Pete.

"Nothing, simply nothing," said Stevenson, with such an air of finality that it seemed useless to prod him further.

"And, I suppose, Mrs. Stevenson knows no more than you do?" he said.

"No. Not of his past nor his sponsors. The women of the place here took him up, and in true feminine fashion they wanted no guarantee or reference. Sorry not to be more helpful, but that's how it is."

But as Pete Gibby walked back through the starless, murky night, he remarked to himself that Friend Stevenson was one large and elegant liar.

Pete Gibby walked slowly back to Knollwood, thinking about Mr. Stevenson. He knew nothing of the man but what he had just seen for himself, but he was puzzled at his attitude.

On the face of things, it was all right for Stevenson to distrust the Swami, but to hesitate about saying so, since the Oriental was his wife's friend.

But Gibby sensed more than that. There was something further about Stevenson's manner that implied a deeper feeling about the whole matter than merely his wife's opinions.

"Oh, Lord," groaned Gibby to himself. "I'm a fine detective. I am! Running off with all sorts of fool ideas that have no basis whatever. If I'm going to look into this case, and certainly am, I must be at least methodical and logical about it. Emily is missing, mysteriously missing, and so is Polly Pennington. Now, first of all, are they together, wherever they are, or separated? If the same influence is responsible for both disappearances, they are probably together. And I feel it must be the same influence. It's too extraordinary for a bride and her mother of honor to be wiped off the earth at the same time, unless by the same agent. But, granting that, where does it get me?"

Gibby trudged along, his mind a blank as far as theories or deductions were concerned. Indeed, his detective instinct was decidedly embryo, being merely a lover of detective stories, and a quick mind for solving their fictional problems.

A real question of mystery had never before come his way, and having one now plunged down before him, he was a little bewildered by his sudden opportunity.

sympathy to the waiting husband and then his thoughts returned to their own tragedy.

For he had begun to look on it as a tragedy. Most certainly something had happened. What sort of happening it could be, he didn't know, couldn't even imagine. But it spelled trouble, and it was near, and yet she is tired. There is something wrong somewhere.

Fatigue which comes from good, hard work is healthful rather than otherwise. It is the fatigue which the usual night's sleep cannot cure that is serious. This is a more persistent kind of fatigue, up in the morning it weighs the victim down. It is like a low-lying mist, all day interfering with pleasure and the capacity for work.

You have to struggle against it. There is no enthusiasm for anything. You feel as old as Methuselah.

The probability is the trouble lies in the high pressure of living today. There is too much crowding going on about us. So much is crowded into a woman's day that she becomes a victim of nerve strain that is hard to cope with.

Before he reached the house at Knollwood, he knew there was no good news there. If Emily had returned, the house would have been lighted up from top to bottom, whereas, there were only lights in the lounge and a few other rooms.

He went in and found Everett Craven was still there, but Rodney and Lamb had not yet returned.

"I don't like your old Stevenson," Gibby said to the lawyer, as he lighted a cigarette.

"Why not?" asked Craven, not greatly interested.

"I don't know. Sort of Doctor Fell, I guess. But he doesn't ring true. He says he can't abide his Oriental Nibs, but as he's a friend of Mrs. Stevenson's he has to swallow him."

"Well, that's about the size of it. And he's not alone in that. Some several husbands put up with the obnoxious Lal Singh because he's a fad with the women."

"Nothing criminal about him, I suppose?"

"Not that I know of," Craven said. "I've looked him over pretty well, and he seems to me just out for the cash."

"Does he charge by the hour?"

"Oh, yes. That is, he gives an afternoon or an evening here and there, and expects and gets a goodly honorarium. It's all right if people choose to fall for it. He got around Emily in the matter of her will, but he didn't get any immediate money from her. Except of course, his own fee, when she engaged him for an afternoon."

"I suppose, Pete," Nell put in, "you're trying to fasten Emily's absence on Mr. Singh. If you only knew how ridiculous it makes you appear! Oh, I know you fancy yourself as a detective, but—"

"Hush up, Nell," said Betty, who was crying now. "I won't have you speak as if Emily had been kidnapped or something."

"Well, where is she then?" Pete spoke abruptly.

But before anyone could respond to his question, Rodney and Lamb came in.

Their dejected air made inquiry unnecessary, and it was in silence that they let Prall take their hats and sticks and provide them with highballs and cigarettes.

"Something's got to be done," said Sayre, heavily.

He spoke as one in a dream or trance.

"You see," he went on, "something must have happened. Emily isn't at any house; we called at all the neighbors. She never got to the hospital, we've been there. We could find nobody who saw her or heard of her after she left this place. Prall saw her go out the back door, and that's all we know. Now, as the person most deeply interested, I feel I should take the helm. I'm not forgetting you, Aunt Judy," he said, with a pathetic look at her, "but as Emily's future husband I feel I have a right to dictate."

"Of course you have, Rodney," Aunt Judy said, tremendously. "Whatever you think best to do, that you must do."

"I think so, and I propose to call the police at once and let them take up the matter. That is, to my mind, the only thing to do. The only argument against it is the unpleasant publicity of it. But I think the time has come to disquiet that. If Emily is all right, she will forgive us for getting so alarmed at her absence, and if she isn't all right, surely we want the help of the police."

DR. COPELAND SAYS—

High Pressure Living of Today Is Cause of Fatigue

—Learn How to Play and—To Relax

SAYS DR. COPELAND

So Many People, Particularly Women, Are Always "Tired" These Modern Times and the Cause Can Be Traced to Days of Crowded Activity.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WHY is it that so many persons, especially women, are looking so careworn and fatigued in this modern age? What makes this "so tired" feeling, and what is the remedy for it?

There seems to be a different quality to the fatigue we meet today. It does not come from too hard work. There is in it the accumulated effects of the strain and stress of the world about us.

It certainly is not natural. DR. COPELAND, for a normal person to be always tired. Yet there are many families where the mother, or a daughter, is burdened with tiredness. She feels it from the time she gets up in the morning until she goes to bed at night.

It isn't because the modern housewife has the physical burdens her grandmother had that she is so fatigued. She has many convenient aids in her housework. Usually she has a smaller family than in former times. She has more time to herself and yet she is tired. There is something wrong somewhere.

Fatigue which comes from good, hard work is healthful rather than otherwise. It is the fatigue which the usual night's sleep cannot cure that is serious. This is a more persistent kind of fatigue, up in the morning it weighs the victim down. It is like a low-lying mist, all day interfering with pleasure and the capacity for work.

Theatres

AT THE METROPOLITAN

In order to determine the comparative volume of the sound of a human voice when pitted against the roar of an airplane engine, tests were made at the flying field of the California Aerial Transport Company in Los Angeles by director Frank R. Capra, preparatory to his making "Flight," the Columbia all-talking aviation special now playing at the Metropolitan theatre.

In "Flight" Jack Holt and Ralph Graves are co-starred under the direction of Capra. This is the same triumvirate that made "Submarine," the record-breaking undersea drama. The script of "Flight" called for a number of sequences during which Jack Holt shouts orders to student flyers in training while airplanes are roaring close by. As these orders are also directed at Ralph Graves and are of important dramatic consequences, Capra did not want to take any chances of failing to register Holt's voice.

The motor of the plane was started and speeded up while Holt and Graves walked into camera range. Holt shouting his orders to Graves in the highest pitch. It was feared that the tremendous roar of the airplane motor would drown out Holt's voice. However, the projection of the film after development proved otherwise.

Over and above the roar of the motor, Holt's voice could be heard as natural as life. This differentiation of sound marked a forward step in the production of talkies.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Of course you enjoy a good, hearty laugh, who doesn't? And, of course, you'll enjoy "Men Are Like That," the current feature at the Cliftona theatre, where it opened last night to long, loud and satisfying laughter. Don't let it slip by without seeing it. "Men Are Like That" is one of the few joyously entertaining pictures the talkies have produced.

Hal Skelly, already an old favorite with film audiences, since his delightful performances in "The Dance of Life" and "Woman Trap," has the classic role of Aubrey Pipper, originated by George Kelly in his famous play, "The Show-Off," from which "Men Are Like That" was made. Skelly is particularly entertaining in this straight-comedy role. His laugh beats all.

"Men Are Like That" is a human comedy of everyday American life. Skelly, the show-off, marries a young girl who puts faith in his bluffing, in spite of the disgusted protests of her family. Disillusioned by married life she still

A real question of mystery had never before come his way, and having one now plumped down before him, he was a little bewildered by his sudden opportunity. He had crossed the bridge over the little ravine and was nearing the big ravine. These two bits of natural scenery were the pride of Hilldale. The whole town was picturesque, the whole topography was hills and dales, but the two ravines were deep, jagged canyons whose rocks had been tossed up from the clefts in the earth by some prehistoric convulsion of nature. The bridges across these were of a rustic sort, and over their railings vines had been trained by the Town Improvement Society, who took intense pride in fostering the fairness of their fair city. Not really a city, Hilldale was a good-sized town and growing apace. The shops and business section were some distance away from the residential Park, and the great estates of the landowners were jealously guarded from invasion of any modern improvements that might mar their natural beauties. A fine motor road had been put through, but otherwise the roads and paths were almost primitive. The houses, usually on a hill or rise of ground, were approached by walks of irregularly shaped flagstones or bits of marble. It was in no sense an old-time place, it was all modern, but it aimed for simplicity and good taste. Sometimes adventurous climbers would go down into the ravines, but it was a wearisome, even dangerous trip, and few dared it. Gibby had paused on the bridge as he crossed the little ravine and leaning against the stout railing, looked down into the dark abyss. The thought struck him that Emily might have fallen over the rail, but he saw at once it was too high for that. Moreover, she had used the bridges all her life and would not dream of leaning over the side too far. Yet he looked down into the black darkness, and determined that when it was again daylight, the ravines must be looked into. A half-moon hung in the sky, but though it somewhat illumined the surrounding scene, its rays did not penetrate the black chasm. He concluded to say nothing of this, however, for it was too remote a possibility and it would probably send the girls into hysterics. So Pete Gibby went on, staring about him at the wooded hills and the scattered houses. Most of the houses showed bright lights, and from some he could hear sounds of music, or even laughing voices. He knew few of them, however; only the young people who had been over to Knollwood for the rehearsal had he even met. He glanced up at the Pennington house as he went on. Surrounded by trees it was on the side of a hill that ran down to the little ravine. Only a few lights showed from its windows, and Gibby felt a wave of compassion for the man who sat there, as uncertain as to his wife's fate as they were about Emily's. Pete was a bit intuitive, and he had sensed a slight hint of resentment in Pennington's attitude. It was almost as if Penn blamed Emily for Polly's disappearance. Almost as if he thought that Emily had urged his wife to go to the hospital to see the new baby. And Pete had gathered that the sight of any baby was liable to send Polly off in one of her nervous spells, and that in such case she was more or less irresponsible. So he gave a thought of real sympathy to the waiting husband and then his thoughts returned to their own tragedy. For he had begun to look on it as a tragedy. Most certainly something had happened. What sort of happening it could be, he didn't know, couldn't even imagine. But it spelled trouble, and it was nearing a crisis. Before he reached the house at Knollwood, he knew there was no good news there. If Emily had returned, the house would have been lighted up from top to bottom, whereas, there were only lights in the lounge and a few other rooms. He went in and found Everett Craven was still there, but Rodney and Lamb had not yet returned. "I don't like your old Stevenson," Gibby said to the lawyer, as he lighted a cigarette. "Why not?" asked Craven, not greatly interested. "I don't know. Sort of Doctor Fell, I guess. But he doesn't ring true. He says he can't abide his Oriental Nibs, but as he's a friend of Mrs. Stevenson's he has to swallow him." "Well, that's about the size of it. And he's not alone in that. Some several husbands put up with the obnoxious Lal Singh because he's a fad with the women." "Nothing criminal about him, I suppose?" "Not that I know of," Craven said. "I've looked him over pretty well, and he seems to me just out for the cash." "Does he charge by the hour?" "Oh, yes. That is, he gives an afternoon or an evening here and there, and expects and gets a goodly honorarium. It's all right if people choose to fall for it. He got around Emily in the matter of her will, but he didn't get any immediate money from her. Except of course, his own fee, when she engaged him for an afternoon." "I suppose, Pete," Nell put in, "you're trying to fasten Emily's absence on Mr. Singh. If you only knew how ridiculous it makes you appear! Oh, I know you fancy yourself as a detective, but—" "Hush up, Nell," said Betty, who was crying now. "I won't have you speak as if Emily had been kidnapped or something." "Well, where is she then?" Pete spoke abruptly. But before anyone could respond to his question, Rodney and Lamb came in. Their dejected air made inquiry unnecessary, and it was in silence that they let Prall take their hats and sticks and provide them with highballs and cigarettes. "Something's got to be done," said Sayre, heavily. He spoke as one in a dream or trance. "You see," he went on, "something must have happened. Emily isn't at any house; we called at all the neighbors'. She never got to the hospital, we've been there. We could find nobody who saw her or heard of her after she left this place. Prall saw her go out the back door, and that's all we know. Now, as the person most deeply interested, I feel I must take the helm. I'm not forgetting you, Aunt Judy," he said, with a pathetic look at her, "but as Emily's future husband I feel I have a right to dictate." "Of course you have, Rodney," Aunt Judy said, tremendously. "Whatever you think best to do, that you must do." "I think so, and I propose to call the police at once and let them take up the matter. That is, to my mind, the only thing to do. The only argument against it is the unpleasant publicity of it. But I think the time has come to discount that. If Emily is all right, she will forgive us for getting so alarmed at her absence, and if she isn't all right, surely we want the help of the police." To Be Continued Tomorrow.

High Pressure Living of Today Is Cause of Fatigue

—Learn How to Play and—Relax

SAYS DR. COPELAND

So Many People, Particularly Women, Are Always "Tired" These Modern Times and the Cause Can Be Traced to Days of Crowded Activity.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WHY is it that so many persons, especially women, are looking so careworn and fatigued in this modern age? What makes this "so tired" feeling, and what is the remedy for it? There seems to be a different quality to the fatigue we meet today. It does not come from too hard work. There is in it the accumulated effects of the strain and stress of the world about us.

It is certainly not natural for a normal person to be always tired. Yet there are many families where the mother, or a daughter, is burdened with tiredness. She feels it from the time she gets up in the morning until she goes to bed at night.

It isn't because the modern housewife has the physical burdens her grandmother had that she is so fatigued. She has many convenient aids in her housework. Usually she has a smaller family than in former times. She has more time to herself and yet she is tired. There is something wrong somewhere.

Fatigue which comes from good, hard work is healthful rather than otherwise. It is the fatigue which the usual night's sleep cannot cure, that is serious. This is a more persistent kind of fatigue. It is felt on waking up in the morning. It weighs the victim down. It is like a low-lying mist, all day interfering with pleasure and the capacity for work.

You have to struggle against it. There is no enthusiasm for anything. You feel as old as Methuselah.

The probability is the trouble lies in the high pressure of living today. There are too many activities going on about us. So much is crowded into a woman's day that she becomes a victim of nerve strain that is hard to overcome. She goes on incessantly with activities of all sorts, hurrying through her meals, always on the rush to go somewhere, and up at all times of the night.

Unless she stops for a complete rest, and unless the right habits of living are substituted for the wrong ones, it is going to become a serious matter. You can't break all the laws of health and right living and not have unpleasant consequences. "Breakdowns" in health are all too common. Do not be one of the company of overfatigued, nervous incapacitated persons. There are some persons who never learn how to play or how to relax. They have one hobby, or some form of relaxation that changes the mental outlook. It may be golf, or a good time at a dance, if you make up your mind and rest after it. But whatever you do, make it your time of fun and play and relaxation. Get plenty of sleep and moderate exercise. Build up your health. You will find yourself refreshed and ready for the routine of daily life.

Bringing up a family is made a much more complicated affair than it used to be. The young mother must understand infant psychology. She must know something about nutritional value. She must cope with the new ideas in education. Perhaps she has troubles of her own with the domestic routine, poor help, or none, and a thousand worries to boot.

Every woman should have some time in the day when she can be alone and rest, and "catch up with herself." It might add ten years to her life if she would do this and keep to good habits of living.

Answers to Health Queries

W. M. Q.—When flowers are left in the house do they take in all the good fresh air for themselves? Should flowers be kept in the house?

A.—No: they thrive on the carbon oxide of the air. I see no reason why you should not have flowers and plants in the house if you care to.

Q.—What causes varicose veins?

A.—Varicose veins are caused by increased tension in the veins, due to either constant external pressure, some obstruction of the deep veins, or, as in many cases, to habitual overexertion, such as long standing.

D. M. D. Q.—Is menthol injurious to the heart?

A.—Are menthol cigarettes more harmful than the plain ones?

A.—No.

A.—I doubt it.

D. M. Q.—What can be done for a large stomach? This condition applies to a girl 11 years old.

A.—It would be wise to take her to a physician for an examination. Perhaps this is a result of rickets.

R. C. L. Q.—What will remove warts?

A.—Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for full particulars and repeat your question.

Theatres

AT THE METROPOLITAN

In order to determine the comparative volume of the sound of a human voice when pitted against the roar of an airplane engine, tests were made at the flying field of the California Airplane Transport Company in Los Angeles by director Frank R. Capra, preparatory to his making "Flight," the Columbia all-talking aviation special now playing at the Metropolitan theatre.

In "Flight" Jack Holt and Ralph Graves are co-starred under the direction of Capra. This is the same triumvirate that made "Submarine," the record-breaking undersea drama. The script of "Flight" called for a number of sequences during which Jack Holt shouts orders to student flyers in training while airplanes are roaring close by. As these orders are also directed at Ralph Graves and are of important dramatic consequences, Capra did not want to take any chances of failing to register Holt's voice.

The motor of the plane was started and speeded up while Holt and Graves walked into camera range, Holt shouting his orders to Graves in the highest pitch. It was feared that the tremendous roar of the airplane motor would drown out Holt's voice. However, the projection of the film after development proved otherwise.

Over and above the roar of the motor, Holt's voice could be heard as natural as life. This differentiation of sound marked a forward step in the production of talkies.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Of course you enjoy a good, hearty laugh, who doesn't? And, of course, you'll enjoy "Men Are Like That," the current feature at the Cliftona theatre, where it opened last night to long, loud and satisfying laughter. Don't let it slip by without seeing it. "Men Are Like That" is one of the few joyously entertaining pictures the talkies have produced.

Hal Skelly, already an old favorite with film audiences, since his delightful performances in "The Dance of Life" and "Woman Trap," has the classic role of Aubrey Piper, originated by George Kelly in his famous play, "The Show-Off," from which "Men Are Like That" was made. Skelly is particularly entertaining in this straight-comedy role. His laugh beats all.

"Men Are Like That" is a human comedy of everyday American life. Skelly, the show-off, marries a young girl who puts faith in his bluffing, in spite of the disgusted protests of her family. Disillusioned by married life she still loves him. He gets himself into many hilariously funny scrapes and her family, in order to protect the girl, has to get him out of them. When real trouble comes, however, he turns his nerve to advantage and saves the day.

Doris Hill, the heroine of "The Studio Murder Mystery" is very lovely as the girl, and Charles Selton, Clara Blandick, Morgan Farley, Helene Chadwick, William B. Davidson, Eugene Pallette and George Fawcett are in the cast. It is another of the great stage plays which Paramount has been bringing to the screen, "The Letter," "Interference," "The Lady Lies," "The Dance of Life," and others. "Men Are Like That" is "The Show-Off," enlivened by the scope of the talking screen.

AT THE GRAND

"Half Marriage," an all talking, all musical, dramatic smash, starring Olive Bordon, Morgan Farley and Ken Murray is at the Grand theatre Wednesday and Thursday. The story is a drama of youth and is a key to modern love madness. Youth and romance play hide and seek in this all-talker.

Newsstand girl in Hull, England, "glorified-girl" in Ziegfeld's Follies, now the idol of screen-struck fans. All in four brief years.

A fast shot of the quick success of Dorothy Mackaill. Success . . . because she gave a new thrill. Quick . . . because of nature-born charm.

That goes, too, for another young star, OLD GOLD. Three years ago, unknown. Now, America's fastest growing cigarette.

"O. G." gave a new taste-thrill . . . through smoother tobaccos, free from irritants. When a girl, or a cigarette, is blessed by nature, a new star rises . . . and fast.

OLD GOLD was first introduced at Atlantic City, June 13th, 1927. In 90 days it had become one of the 4 best sellers in Atlantic Coast summer hotels.

CUBS AND ROBINS TO MEET IN CRUCIAL NATIONAL SERIES

By COPELAND C. BURG

NEW YORK, June 25 — Every once in a while in the life of every important person there comes a time when he tightens his belt, adjusts his tie and walks forth with a light in his eyes which betokens he has entered the land in which there is no turning back. And the Brooklyn Robins almost choked themselves on their ties today, for the league leading Robins come to grips this afternoon with the Chicago Cubs, who have disturbed them plenty in the past.

The second place Bruins showed they were in such form yesterday when they walked over the Phillies 6 to 1, that the big sticks of the Flock will have to work elegantly if the crucial Chicago series is not to be the start of the long-predicted Brooklyn slump.

Blair and Wilson of the Cubs' lethal row, along with Stephenson and Grimm, each got two hits yesterday and this underslung person, Hack Wilson, who has cracked out 22 homers this season, may again lead his teammates in an undoing attack.

Handsome Larry Benton subdued his former teammates, the Giants, 4 to 1. The Cincinnati Red-head teased along the New Yorkers by allowing them 11 hits, but when it came to transforming these into runs Mr. Benton was fearfully firm and eight Giants died on the bags.

Winning their third straight from Cleveland, 7 to 0, the Senators gained on the column-topping Athletics. Hadley gave the Indians only five bingles.

Wallie Berger tied Wilson for the lead in National League circuiters when he homered off Hallahan as the Cardinals overwhelmed the Boston Braves, 11 to 3.

KONJOLA PROVED RIGHT MEDICINE IN THIS CASE

Ashtabula Man Freed of Stomach Stomach Ailment By Action of New and Different Medicine.

MR. PAUL E. BENJAMIN

"Of all the medicines I tried, Konjola proved the finest by far," said Mr. Paul E. Benjamin, Route No. 3, Ashtabula. "A severe case of stomach trouble was the bane of my life. Even though I ate small quantities of the lightest foods I was in misery afterward and my stomach ached constantly. I was losing weight and strength constantly and the least exertion made me tired and listless. My physical condition generally, was at a low ebb that I feared I would never be any better.

"I knew before I had completed the first bottle of Konjola that I had found the right medicine. As I continued the treatment my health rapidly improved. Three bottles of this great medicine made a well man of me. My food digests perfectly today and I have steadily gained in weight, strength and vitality. I strongly recommend this great medicine to all who suffer as I did."

Although Konjola works quickly, from six to eight bottles are recommended for most cases. Many cases are helped in less time but a thorough treatment in the end brings best results.

Konjola is sold in Circleville at Hamilton & Ryan's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

ROBINS AND ROBINS TO MEET IN CRUCIAL NATIONAL SERIES

By COPELAND C. BURG

NEW YORK, June 25 — Every important person there comes a time when he tightens his belt, adjusts his tie and walks forth with a light in his eyes which betokens he has entered the land in which there is no turning back. And the Brooklyn Robins almost checked themselves on their ties today, for the league leading Robins come to grips this afternoon with the Chicago Cubs, who have disturbed them plenty in the past.

The second place Bruins showed they were in such form yesterday when they walked over the Philadelphia 6 to 1, that the big sticks of the Block will have to work extra hard if the crucial Chicago series is not to be the start of the long-predicted Brooklyn slump. Blair and Wilson of the Cubs' initial row, along with Stephenson and Grimm, each got two hits yesterday and this underslung person, Hack Wilson, who has cracked out 22 homers this season, may again lead his teammates in an undoing attack.

Handsome Larry Benton subdued his former teammates, the Giants, 4 to 1. The Cincinnati Red-head teased along the New York-ers by allowing them 11 hits, but when it came to transforming these into runs Mr. Benton was fearfully firm and eight Giants died on the bags.

Winning their third straight from Cleveland, 7 to 0, the Senators gained on the column-topping Athletics. Hadley gave the Indians only five bingles.

Wallie Berger tied Wilson for the lead in National League circuiters when he homered off Hallahan as the Cardinals overwhelmed the Boston Braves, 11 to 3.

KONJOLA PROVED RIGHT MEDICINE IN THIS CASE

Ashtabula Man Freed of Stubborn Stomach Ailment By Action of New and Different Medicine.

MR. PAUL E. BENJAMIN

"Of all the medicines I tried, Konjola proved the finest by far," said Mr. Paul E. Benjamin, Route No. 3 Ashtabula. "A severe case of stomach trouble was the bane of my life. Even though I ate small quantities of the lightest foods I was in misery afterward and my stomach ached constantly. I was losing weight and strength constantly and the least exertion made me tired and listless. My physical condition generally was at a low ebb that I feared I would never be any better."

"I knew before I had completed the first bottle of Konjola that I had found the right medicine. As I continued the treatment my health rapidly improved. Three bottles of this great medicine made a well man of me. My food digests perfectly today and I have steadily gained in weight, strength and vitality. I strongly recommend this great medicine to all who suffer as I did."

Although Konjola works quickly from six to eight bottles are recommended for most cases. Many cases are helped in less time but a thorough treatment in the end brings best results.

Konjola is sold in Circleville at Hamilton & Ryan's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.
